

JASON PICKART

Jason Pickart is a trailblazer known for his contributions in defense contracting and process innovation. Currently serving as the Director of Integration Planning for the Department of Defense Chief Information Officer, Jason is leading a multi-agency effort to improve business processes between the Department of Defense and Veterans Affairs.

Previously, he expertly managed a team at Defense Health Agency, strategically formulating acquisition strategies and providing comprehensive support for the monumental $5 billion Defense Healthcare Management System Modernization program. Prior to this, he showcased innovative prowess as he fostered future competition through novel contracting approaches while revolutionizing contracting processes at the VC-25B program, reducing proposal, negotiation, and award periods, and diversified the F-16 supply chain through a multiple-award indefinite delivery contract.

Jason's impact extends beyond Government service both in and out of uniform; he has served in multiple roles at the Dayton Chapter of NCMA, a trusted advisor to the national leadership body, and a driving force behind strategic planning and education. With a master's degree in Procurement and Acquisition Management and a wealth of certifications and awards, including Lean Six Sigma Master Black Belt, Jason's unwavering dedication and transformative insights continue to shape industries and inspire professionals across the country.
