

Russell Blaine

Russ Blaine is executive director, acquisition policy & compliance, with Raytheon Technologies' Corporate Office of the General Counsel team. In his position, he works with industry associations, defense industrial base peers, and internal experts to provide input to emerging acquisition and contract-related statutes, regulations, and policies, and to prepare Raytheon Technologies' business units for compliance with the same. He has over 30 years of defense-related experience and has held executive positions in contract management, business development, operations, and proposal development. Prior to retiring from the U.S. Air Force in 2009, Blaine served as director of contracting and chief of staff at the Electronic Systems Center, Hanscom Air Force Base, Massachusetts. He subsequently held industry positions as vice president for program development with KBR Wyle, and as chief operating officer for Beyond Mission Capable Solutions, a woman-owned small business providing cyber security engineering to DoD and industry clients. Blaine served as national president of NCMA during its 2014 program year.
